

The first Table.

A briefe Table of the interpretation of the proper names which are chiefly found in the Olde Testament, where- in the first number signifieth the Chapter, the second the Verse.

Whereas the wickednesse of time, and the blindenesse of the former age hath bene such, that all things altogether have bene abused and corrupted, so that the very right names of diuers of the holy men named in the Scriptures have bene forgotten, and now seeme strange vnto vs, and the names of infants that should euer have some godly aduertisements in them, and should be memorials and markes of the children of God receiued into his household, have bene hereby also changed and made the signes and badges of idolatrie and heathenish impietie: wee haue now set forth this Table of the names that be most vsed in the old Testament, with their interpretations, as the Hebrew importeth, partly to call backe the godly from that abuse, when they shall know the true names of the godly Fathers, and what they signifie, that their children now named after them, may haue testimonies by their very names, that they are within that faithfull familie that in all their doings had euer God before their eyes, and that they are bound by these their names to serue God from their infancie, and haue occasion to prayse him for his workes wrought in them, and their fathers, but chiefly to restore the names to their integritie, whereby many places of the Scriptures and secret mysteries of the holy Ghost shall better be vnderstood. We haue medled rarely with the Greeke names, because their interpretation is vncertaine, and many of them are corrupted from their originall, as wee may also see these Hebrew names set in the margin of this Table, which haue been corrupted by the Grecians. Now for the other Hebrew names that are not here interpreted, let not the diligent Reader be carefull: for he shall find them in places most conuenient amongst the Annotations: at least so many as may seeme to make for any edification, and vnderstanding of the Scriptures.
